Iter" songs, that shows the good side of the Bowery boy. It was written, under pressure, in twenty-five minutes.

The origin of the music of the sung-to-death "Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay" has been shrouded in mystery. Henry J. Sayers, who wrote the words, picked up the melody somewhere in St. Louis. Some say it is of Indian origin, but nothing certain is known of it. So popular was the song that Mr. Sayers has received as high a royalty as $150 a month.

sugar imported from bounty-paying countries are not the same, and that it requires a less quantity of raw cane than of raw beet to produce a given quantity of refined. The McKinley act did not require the domestic refiner to pay any duty whatever on raw sugar, no matter what country it came from, while the present net subjects the refiner to an additional discriminating duty on the raw sugar purchased by him, if it is imported from Germany. Austria, Hungary, or other countries paying bounties. This discriminating duty under the recent act instead of being a briefit to the refiner is a disadvantage to him, because it compels him to pay that much more for his raw sugar, and while it is true that a discrimination of the same rate per pound is made upon imported refined, it does not amount to as much as the discrimination upon the raw, because, as already stated it takes illicit pounds of raw to
